A Letter from Fr. Jack Zamboni, Rector

Fr. Jack Zamboni

Absolute Mystery

Dear Friends,

I've recently read *The Virgin of Prince Street* by Sonja Livingston, an author and teacher of writing who is in my Circle Group in the Living School, the spiritual formation program we began together in August, 2018. To her astonishment, Sonja, in her 40's, found herself returning to Corpus Christi, the Roman Catholic parish in Rochester, NY, that she'd left in her 20's. She writes about a variety of Expeditions into Devotion (including her search for the statue of the Virgin Mary, gone missing in the interim, that had spoken to her heart as a child) so as to better understand the place of devotion in her own life. It's a rich and moving book, and I highly recommend it.

I was hooked from the start by the first essay, Absolute Mystery, in which my friend writes about her reluctance to say the word God. There is more than one reason for Sonja's hesitancy, but chief among them is the limitations of language where God is concerned; how easily religious language [seems] to trap wonder into cardboard boxes. She shares words of the poet Jack Gilbert: What we feel most has no name. She notes that devout Jews do not utter the God of Israel's name. Christian theologians also see the problem: If you comprehend it, it is not God, wrote St. Augustine in the 5th century. Karl Rahner in the 20th century preferred Absolute Mystery to God to speak of the One who is above all names.

God is closer to us than our bodies, according to the Qur'an, Sonja writes, closer than the jugular vein. So near we approach the place where words have no business. Or have important business if only we learn to use them in new ways.

Some words get closer than others. Verbs do better than nouns. Metaphor occasionally pulls back the curtain to reveal glimpses. But even then we are children tossing pebbles at the sky.

When an acquaintance asks Sonja if she believes in God, her struggles with the word leave her unsatisfied by her halting response and the awareness that between question and answer, how little [they'd] actually managed to say to one another. The essay concludes as she writes of what she wished in hindsight she'd thought to answer at the time. To find out, you can listen to her read the essay here. (Sonja graciously recorded it at my request, and it's shorter than my sermons!). I will just say it has something to do with the wonder evoked by sheep, old men in a café, and fireflies.

If God is, indeed, Absolute Mystery, as Rahner and Sonja rightly say, how are we to connect with the One who is closer to us than our bodies yet also above all names? Christians believe that the Holy

One, knowing our incapacity to know, has come to us in the person of Jesus; the Divine Mystery present in a human face, body, and life. Of course, this doesn't negate the mystery; if anything it increases it. How can Absolute Mystery become human? Theologians wrestled with that impossible question in the first centuries of the Christian era, and eventually came up with some agreed-upon language to talk about it (we call them creeds). But like all human language about God, the creeds are no more than fingers pointing towards the moon.

How then might we access the Absolute Mystery in whom, unexplainably, we live and move and have our being? We could do much worse than to follow Sonja's expeditions into the devotion of wonder, of which the medieval mystic Meister Eckhart also wrote:

*God is not what you think
or even what you believe,
because God is a word unspoken,
a thought unthought,
a belief unbelieved.
So if you wish to know this God,
practice wonder,
do what is good, and
cultivate silence.
The rest will follow.*

Peace,

Jack ✕

It Is Coming!

Consecration Sunday – November 10th

One Service 10:00AM (Catered Brunch following Service)

Prayer of Saint Francis

*Make me a channel of Your peace,
Where there is hatred, let me bring Your love
Where there is injury, Your pardon Lord,
And where there's doubt, true faith in You.*

*Make me a channel of Your Peace.
Where there's despair in life, let me bring hope.*

*And where there's darkness only light,
And where there's sadness ever joy.*

*Oh, Master grant that I may never seek
So much to be consoled as to console,
To be understood as to understand,
To be loved as to love with all my soul.*

*Make me a channel of Your peace.
It is in pardoning that we are pardoned,
In giving of ourselves that we receive,
And in dying that we're born to eternal life.*

OCTOBER HEALTHY BITS BY CHRIS COLWELL

This month's Healthy Corner includes 2 important messages:

 Please remember that October is Breast Cancer Awareness month. Good health is so important – please remember to make an appointment for your annual mammogram. Early detection is key in surviving any type of cancer. Regular self-exams along with yearly mammograms can help make breast cancer a thing of the past.

 Our Fall Blood Drive at St. Francis will be held Wednesday, October 30, 2019 from 3-8pm. Here are 10 interesting facts about donating blood from medicaldaily.com

1) Donating Blood Is Good For Your Heart

Blood flow and blood volume is integral to keeping the heart beating. However, while it may sound counterintuitive, regularly donating blood can actually improve heart health, not compromise it. According to Blood Flow Online, donating blood regularly can help to reduce how thick and sticky your blood is, thus allowing blood to flow more easily through the blood vessels and reach the heart faster.

2) Donating Blood Lowers Your Cancer Risk

Donating blood can reduce the donor's risk of developing cancer. Iron, one of the main minerals found in blood, has been known to increase the amount of free-radical damage in the body. However, a 2008 study found that donating blood helps reduce iron stores, thus reducing overall individual cancer risk.

3) Could Justify Skipping A Workout

If saving the lives of others and improving your own personal health isn't enough to get you to donate blood, how about the possible weight loss advantages. According to LiveStrong, you can burn about 650 calories per donation of one pint of blood —that's even more than what you burn in a 30 minute run!

4) One Man Saved 2 Million Babies Due To His Rare Blood

While it's estimated that the average person can save about 1,000 lives in a lifetime due to donating blood, James Harrison was able to save around 2 million due to his rare blood type. Harrison's blood contained high levels of an antibody known as anti-D immunoglobulin, which was specifically used to help babies with a condition known as Rhesus disease. In short, the immune system of mothers carrying babies with Rhesus disease attacks the fetus. However, a transfusion of Harrison's blood can prevent such an attack.

5) Coconut Water Can Be Used As Substitute In Emergency

According to ABC Science, in the case of an emergency, medical professionals can substitute coconut water as an alternative to plasma. Although the two are far from identical, coconut water has about one-fortieth the sodium level of plasma, while the potassium level is about 10-15 times higher. In the case where there is no IV available for a dehydrated patient, drinking coconut water will do.

6) Most Blood Goes To Cancer Patients

We may picture roadside trauma when we imagine where blood donations go, but in reality, only about 2 percent of all blood donations go to trauma patients. It's actually cancer patients who receive the most blood.

7) Blood Shortages Happen Most During The Holidays

Everyone tends to get a bit busy over the holidays, and blood donation trends show this. According to the Community Blood Bank of Northwest Pennsylvania and Western New York, blood shortages happen most during summer and winter holidays, so this is when you should keep the practice in mind most.

8) Someone Needs Blood Every Two Seconds In The U.S.

It's hard to imagine just how important blood donations are, but according to the American Red Cross, someone in the U.S. is in need of blood every two seconds. Aside from those with cancer and trauma patients, blood donations are also used for surgeries, obstetrics, and patients with specific blood disorders.

9) Type O Positive Blood Is The Most Commonly Needed

Although all types of blood are needed and accepted, type O positive is the most needed. It's the most common blood type, so it's the most likely to be transfused.

10) Only 10 Percent Of Eligible U.S. Population Donates Blood

According to New York Blood Center, anyone 17 years old, weighing at least 110 pounds, and who is in good health is eligible to donate blood. Unfortunately, less than 10 percent of the eligible population does.

Please sign up to participate in our Blood Drive on October 30 – you'll feel proud to know you've saved lives in our St. Francis community.

Thank You,
Chris Colwell
